Daniel Webster: On the Political Affairs of the United States Sir, In your public addresses or speeches, and in those of other gentlemen of high political distinction, I have often seen an opinion expressed like this - That intelligence and virtue are the basis of a republican government, or that intelligence and virtue in the people are necessary to the preservation and support of a republican government. These words, intelligence and virtue are very comprehensive in their uses or application, and perhaps too indefinite to furnish the premises for the inference deduced from them. Men may be very intelligent in some departments of literature, arts and science; but very ignorant of branches of learning in other departments. By intelligence, as applicable to political affairs, it may be presumed that those who use the term, intend it to imply a correct knowledge of the Constitution and laws of the country, and of the several rights and duties of the citizens. But, Sir, the opinion that intelligence in the people of a...
