CHAPTER IV THE CULTIVATION OF THE MATHEMATICAL IMAGINATION Theorists in education sometimes imagine that a good teacher should not allow the work of his class to become mechanical at all. A year or two of practical work in a school (especially with examinations looming ahead) cures one of all such delusions. Education involves not only teaching, but also training. Training implies that work shall become mechanical; Teaching involves preventing mechanicalness from reaching a degree fatal to progress. We must therefore allow much of the actual work to be done in a mechanical manner, without direct consciousness of its meaning; an intelligent teacher will occasionally rouse his pupils to full consciousness of what they are doing; and if he can do so without producing confusion he may be complimented and his class congratulated. We teach laws of curves by reference to certain straight lines--tangents, co-ordinates, radii, and c. These lines bear the same kind of relation to the curves which the framework of sticks fastened into a pot bears to the climbing plant which is the true object of the gardeners care. The plant itself is living and growing; the justification for the existence of the framework consists in the fact that it would be impossible to get the true enjoyment of the plant without its aid. The co-ordinates form no part of what we want to teach about; but we cannot learn without their help. They enable us to see how the curve came...
